Whether or not you or your bridesmaids are planning your upcoming bachelorette party, there are many entertaining options here in Indianapolis to fit every bride-to-be. Here are some ideas to get you and your bridal party started on the planning process:

Things to keep in mind when planning your bachelorette party:

- Consider age, budget and interests of your bridesmaids, friends and family who will be attending the Bachelorette party before you make any decisions. While some might enjoy a burlesque show, others might feel uncomfortable. Try to strike a balance between what the bride might enjoy and what would be appropriate for everyone, and offer multiple options for your friends to participate. There are a wide variety of bachelorette party entertainment options for everyone's enjoyment here in Indianapolis, so you're bound to find the perfect place.
- Find a location that suits everyone who will be attending your party. Will some of your friends or family come from out of town? Many Indianapolis area hotels offer special room rates for brides-to-be, and may offer package deals with restaurants or bars for admission or discounts. Having overnight accommodations for your bachelorette party guests will make it easier than trying to coordinate individual transportation and parking. Also consider that Saturday nights are the busiest nights for bachelorette parties, but you may find it easier or cheaper to party on a different day of the week, such as Friday or Sunday night.
- Do you need transportation during the event? Many Indianapolis limousine services offer special deals for bachelorette parties, so you can all travel in style without worrying about having a designated driver. Many of these limos accomodate beverage service and can take you from place to place while you sit back and enjoy each other's company.

- Book in advance any lodging, transportation or entertainment reservations to ensure that you get the best rates and have all of your details ironed out before the big party. Consider holidays as well as major events, conferences, concerts or sporting events taking place in Indianapolis during your party so you don't run into any unexpected surprises. such as that your favorite hotel or venue is booked for the evening, or parking is more expensive for the evening or weekend.

Now that you've thought more about the logistics of bachelorette party planning, you can get to the fun part of actually planning it. Stay tuned to the IndyBride2B blog for our Indianapolis bachelorette party ideas.
